Southwest PA Says NO MORE hosts Promundo Leadership to Present Man Box Study

- Global leader in promoting gender justice and preventing violence, Promundo, is coming to Pittsburgh -

WHAT: Southwest Says NO MORE has teamed up with Promundo to host Men & Masculinities in the U.S. in the Age of #MeToo.

The program will cover how men think about their roles and how this impacts violence and abuse toward women and girls. The workshop will explore the ways in which social norms about masculinity are changing, how they are not and what this means for gender-violence prevention efforts.

Speakers from Promundo leadership include Jane Kato-Wallace, director of programs, and Brian Heilman, senior research officer. Ms. Kato-Wallace has played a large role in the development and expansion of the global MenCare Campaign. Mr. Heilman is a co-author of the 2017 State of the World's Fathers and 2016 State of America's Fathers reports, the lead author of The Man Box study.

The Man Box report, launched by Promundo and Unilever is a new study on young men's attitudes, behaviors and understandings of manhood.
